The LOVE Brand

by Oren Arnold

"Prettiest girl that ever came West" is what they said about Miss Lillybelle Plunkett; eyes like violets in the forest, cheeks like mountain apples at autumn time. When her pa settled down, no wonder all the cowboys came courting.

"Miss Lil," said the first suitor, "I thought I'd just bring you this little present." His lariat rope held a valuable calf, and on its side he had burned LIL.

That tribute so pleased the lady that all the other cowboys began branding stock LIL for her, vying with each other. Reward each time was a red-lipped smile and sometimes a kiss. And, to round out our true romance, did she then choose one of the suitors for her wedding day?
